The Pennsylvania Railroad 1901 Summer Excursion Route Book.

On June 1 the Passenger Department of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company published the 1901 edition of the Summer Excursion Route Book. This work is designed to provide the public with descriptive notes of the principal Summer resorts of Eastern America, with the best routes for reaching them, and the rates of fare. It contains all the principal seashore and mountain resorts of the East, and over seventeen hundred different routes or combinations of routes. The book has been compiled with the greatest care, and altogether is the most complete and comprehensive handbook of Summer travel ever offered to the public.

The cover is handsome and striking, printed in colors, and the book contains several maps, presenting the exact routes over which tickets are sold. The book is profusely illustrated with fine half-tone cuts of scenery at the various resorts and along the lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

This very interesting book may be procured at any Pennsylvania Railroad ticket office at the nominal price of ten cents, or, upon application to the general office, Broad Street Station, by mail for twenty cents.

DOYLESTOWN.

Doylestown has been very much interested in trolley matters during the past week. The Doylestown and Willow Grove Company has torn up Main street and is putting down ties and rails to extend their road from the present terminus at State and Main streets to the northern limits of the borough. The extension will be a great convenience to the people residing on North Main street, some of whom who are now obliged to walk nearly a half mile to take the cars. The extension is being pushed very rapidly and the work is being done in a fashion that puts the traveling public to very little inconvenience. It will be but a short time before the cars will run to the borough line at the north. It is also announced that the Doylestown and Easton Company have received bills of lading for their material and have erected a shanty for their workmen at Danboro. The borough ordinance granting right of way provides that construction must begin by June 25. In addition to these projects comes the announcement that a new company has been chartered to build a road from Doylestown to New Hope by way of Mechanicsville. Such a road would traverse the famous Cuttalossa Valley, one of the most picturesque spots in the county. For many years the people of this community have been anxious to have a road to the Delaware, and there is no doubt but that it would enjoy a liberal patronage in summer. There is a long stretch of magnificent country from New Hope north on the Delaware which is destined some day to become the site of fine country seats. The officers of the company that proposes to build to New Hope are all Bucks county men. They are as follows: President, Recorder Burroughs Michener; secretary, William C. Ryan, of Doylestown, who is attorney for the Willow Grove Company; treasurer, Charles S. Balderston, Solebury. The Directors are chiefly residents of the county who reside along the proposed route. They are A. Worthington Rich, C. S. Balderston, Albert Preston, William Watson, Deputy Recorder Frank J. Rich, Florence A. Rich, William C. Ryan, and Burroughs Michener. Extension of route was filed on Saturday by Secretary Ryan. It describes the route as beginning at the east line of the borough and extending by Maple avenue, State street, Church street, and Oakland avenue to Main street, and beginning at the east terminus at the Durham road, extending out the Doylestown and Lumberton road to Cuttalossa bridge, thence to Centre Hill and to the road leading to Philip's mill to the River road and then to New Hope.

In the work of teaching the Filipinos about to be inaugurated by the government two of the young college graduates who will undertake this duty are of Bucks county stock. They are Edward Williams, of Buckingham, son of Mrs. Jennie Williams, and T. Walter Gilkyson, of Phoenixville, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Gilkyson, former residents of Doylestown. Both young men are graduates of Swarthmore and the George School.

General Davis, of Doylestown, is convinced that the Southerner can beat us in the matter of oratory. The General presented to the Mayor of Charleston a few evenings ago, at the Southern Industrial Convention, in Philadelphia, a Confederate flag captured at Charleston. The act touched the hearts of the Southerners and called forth the fervid eloquence for which the sons of the South are famous.

The date of the National Farm School commencement, upon which occasion Secretary of Agriculture, James Wilson, will deliver an address, has been fixed for Wednesday, June 26. TULLYTOWN.

The members of the Penn Country Club have had their interest in fishing aroused by the tale told by the colored steward, Alexis Allen, of his fishing experience of last Tuesday. In company with Russell Taylor he fished in the Delaware last Tuesday afternoon. After several hours' waiting Alexis felt a strong pull on his line. He brought his fish close to the boat and pulled when it jumped out of the water. "Al" thought by the size that he had hooked the sea serpent, and dropping the line with a wild yell fell over in the bottom of the boat. So like the proverbial "biggest fish ever caught," this denizen of the Delaware got away. Russell Taylor vouches for "Al's" statement that he had a big fish of some kind on the line and volunteered the further information that he thinks it was a shad. The knowing ones of the P. C. C. are laughing in their sleeves for they have heard that there are still some pretty good sized carp in the Delaware river.

John Tully is considering a proposition to lease his factory or a portion of it for a leather factory. The Ketoowah Tribe, I. O. of R. M., who occupy the second floor have consented to release their rights in their yearly lease, and vacate on short notice, should the pending negotiations result in the decision of the leather manufacturers to locate here. The Red Men are interested in everything that tends to the advancement of the interests of Tullytown and wish to go on record as an organization that stands for improvements. It is reported that the new factory will employ twenty-five men. Should Mr. Tully secure the factory it will be the beginning of the greatest advance this borough has made for ten years.

The committee of Tullytown Castle, No. 499, K. G. E., having charge of the arrangements for the Atlantic City excursion to be held on Saturday, July 20, 1901, have completed the arrangements and bills and tickets will be out this week. This excursion coming in the height of the season and at the low rate of $1.25 for the round trip ought to insure its being largely patronized by the people throughout this section. The committee is assured that the accommodations both by boat and train will be superior to those of last year, and nothing will be left undone to make the affair a great success.

A special meeting of the School Board was held last Monday evening to consider the matter of taking action in the collection of delinquent school taxes. The same method as that employed last year will be adopted. If you have not yet paid your taxes do not neglect to do so within the next three months, you will save money by paying early, and save the Justice of the Peace the trouble of forcing collections.

Several residents of Tullytown attended the commencement exercises of Miss Baker's school of music at Bristol on Tuesday evening. The exercises consisted of a musicale. Miss Florence Simpson, of this place, delighted her many friends who attended by her brilliant execution on the piano.

Miss Louise White, of Fallsington, has been elected principal of the public school here. Miss Damaris Peters, of Gettysburg, was elected teacher of the second primary. The Morrisville base ball team will journey to Frankford on Saturday afternoon next, at which time they will cross bats with the crack team of that place on the latter's grounds. There should be something doing at this meeting as our boys are out for revenge on account of the defeat administered to us last year by the Frankford team, and the fact that the Morrisville team has been greatly strengthened by the acquisition of several new crack players who will make their first appearance with our boys on this occasion. Justice and Vandegrift will be the battery for the Morrisville team.

PENN'S MANOR.

Mrs. Joseph Beck, who has been quite ill, is again able to be about the house.

Many farmers in this section were busy on last Saturday transplanting tomato and tobacco plants.

Our enterprising butcher and farmer, F. Heitzman, brought home a load of young pigs from over in New Jersey, which he has advertised for sale.

William Nutt and family are in a very destitute condition. The husband has been sick for a long time, and is not able to do any kind of manual labor. Any assistance for their support would be gratefully and thankfully received by them.

Mrs. Alfred Lee, who has been ill for a long time, was relieved of her suffering on Sunday night last by death. She leaves a husband with two little children. The heartfelt sympathy in their sore bereavement is extended to them by the community. The funeral took place from their late home on William Bond's place on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Pittman, of the Christian Church, Tullytown, officiated. Interment, Morrisville.

Children's Day was celebrated in the Chapel on last Sunday evening. No pains were spared to make it a success; and the weather being favorable, the managers succeeded beyond their expectations, for it surpassed anything in every particular ever held on similar occasions since the inauguration of the chapel. Long before the opening hour the seats were filled to the last one, and at the opening of the meeting quite a number were obliged to stand up. The programme was an excellent one and was very satisfactorily executed by every participant. The chapel inside was literally clothed in greens and flowers, cut and potted, in profusion. Such a tastefully arranged decoration was never seen in the chapel. It was like coming into fairyland. All worked together as a unit to make it a success. The managers deserve great credit for their efforts. To mention any special one would not be just, as there was rivalry all around. Our neighboring villages, Tullytown, Wheat Sheaf, Penn Valley, Fallsington, and Morrisville, were well represented.

Rev. Franklin Paist occupied the pulpit of the Eddington Presbyterian Church Sunday morning, preaching a very eloquent and instructive sermon.

Mrs. Henry Jones entertained the Missionary Society of the Eddington Presbyterian Church at her home on Thursday afternoon last. Sixty-six dollars was received. Miss Penrose, of Philadelphia, was present and spoke in behalf of foreign missions. Ice cream, cake and strawberries were served.

The bride was beautifully attired in white satin ornamented with orange blossoms. Miss Dudley, sister of the groom, was maid of honor, and Miss Amy Leedom and Miss Lauterbach bridesmaids. A reception followed at the home of the bride's father, Cornwells. Mr. and Mrs. Dudley have taken a tour to Buffalo and will visit the Pan-American Exposition.

The social of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Eddington Presbyterian Church was very well attended last Thursday evening. Miss Penrose spoke very enthusiastically of the work to be accomplished in the heathen lands, presenting to the people the urgent need of their help in the work. The speaker illustrated by means of a map the parts of the world where the missionaries were laboring and those parts where the Gospel had not yet reached. It was appalling to see how much of the world remains in darkness. Miss Penrose had with her several curios she had received from foreign lands.

The commencement exercises of the Cornwells and Eddington schools were largely attended on Tuesday evening in the P. O. S. of A. Hall, Cornwells. Slotter gave a profitable talk to the graduates. Music was furnished by the Emery brothers, of Philadelphia, and Mr. McCauly favored the audience with solos and a recitation.

HIS LIFE SAVED

BY CHAMBERLAIN'S COLIC, CHOLERA AND DIARRHOEA REMEDY.

"I am sure that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy at one time saved my life," says A. E. Lafalette, of Gregory Landing, Clark county, Missouri. "I was in such bad shape that the doctors said I could not live. When I was at the lowest ebb, one of my neighbors brought in a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and I took it and got instant relief. I soon got up and around. That was nine years ago and I am still in good health. Since then the medicine has always been in the house and always will be. It is the best on earth." For sale by all druggists.

Unnecessary Loss of Time.

W. S. Whedon, cashier of the First National Bank of Winterset, Iowa, in a recent letter gives some experience with a carpenter working in his employ, that will be of value to other mechanics. He says: "I had a carpenter working for me who was obliged to stop work for several days on account of being troubled with diarrhoea. I mentioned to him that I had been similarly troubled and that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy had cured me. He bought a bottle of it from the druggist here and informed me that one dose cured him, and he is again at his work." For sale by all druggists.

The popular view of the relation of the blood to human character and conduct is marked in many a familiar expression. We speak of there being "bad blood" between people at enmity, of "blue blood" as indicating ancestry, of "black blood" as describing a treacherous nature, and in many another phrase mark our belief that in the mental, moral and physical man, "the blood is the life." The one basis of a healthful, happy and useful life is pure blood. With the blood pure, disease has no permanent lodging place in the system. For this reason the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery rids the body of diseases which have their origin in impurity of the blood. It absolutely purifies the blood, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter, increasing the action of the blood making glands, and building up the body by supplying the blood in quantity and quality such as is essential to a condition of health. It cures ninety-eight people out of every hundred who give it a fair trial.

Biliousness is a condition characterized by a disturbance of the digestive organs. The stomach is debilitated, the liver torpid, the bowels constipated. There is a loathing of food, pains in the bowels, dizziness, coated tongue and vomiting, first of the undigested or partly digested food and then of bile. Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets allay the disturbances of the stomach and create a healthy appetite. They also tone up the liver to a healthy action and regulate the bowels. Try them and you are certain to be much pleased with the result. 9-23-6-20.

Dyspeptics cannot be long lived because to live requires nourisment. Food is not nourishing until it is digested. A disordered stomach cannot digest food, it must have assistance. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests all kinds of food without aid from the stomach, allowing it to rest and regain its natural funtions. Its elements are exactly the same as the natural digestive fluids and it simply can't help but do you good. J. Edward Wright, Central Pharmacy, 308 Mill street.

A surgical operation is not necessary to cure piles. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve saves all that expense and never fails. Beware of counterfeits. J. Edward Wright, Central Pharmacy, 308 Mill street.

THURSDAY JUNE 20, 1901.

As seven states hold elections this year seven Democratic platforms must be written, but nobody is anxious to tackle the job.

Fighting against civilization is an expensive resistance. China would be $337,000,000 better off but for its antagonism in that line.

Negotiations are pending to establish a London morning paper, run entirely by women, following the example of the newspaper Froquode, published in Paris.

Free trade or even "tariff tinkering" is such a deplorable trade depresser that manufacturers warn the people not to even talk about it for fear of the baneful influence.

Society ladies are advancing the style of not giving prizes as an inducement for inspiration in games. It is a sensible plan, and will save many a lady from cheating, as has become the custom among so many.

By the final official census count of the territory of Oklahoma the population is 398,331. These people have one representative in Congress. The State of Nevada is officially credited with a population of 42,334, and has two United States Senators and one member in the House of Representatives.

In holding up the licenses of the Perkasie hotels recently the court shot an arrow of criticism at the Central News of that borough, whose comment the learned Judge indirectly characterized as the vaporing of a feverish or alcoholic mind. The News resents the insinuation and declares it "unwarranted abuse."

The piscatorial editor of the Doylestown Republican is ever on the lookout for novel items. Last week he discovered a remarkable frog which was taken from the Neshaminy. In the frog's stomach was a small muskrat! The editor says the statement will be doubted by many readers, but, nevertheless, it is a fact.

Judge Solly has been formally inducted into the office as Judge of the new Orphans' Court of Montgomery county. The Judiciary of our neighboring county now comprises Judges Swartz, Weand and Solly, all honorable and upright men—men of fine legal attainments. The county is rapidly growing in population, and probably in another epoch it may become necessary to establish a fourth tribunal.

The Constitution of the United States in prescribing the methods by which it may be amended, virtually forbids amendment in one particular. No State is to be deprived without its consent of its equal suffrage in the Senate. The first State to ratify the Constitution was Delaware and yet the Senate has no members from Delaware. It is greatly to be regretted, even if Delaware's failure to be represented is by its own consent.

Somebody having made the wild charge that President McKinley is an ultra protectionist the Boston Journal remarks: "To find ultra protectionism it is necessary to go way back to the days of Thomas Jefferson, who wished that the Atlantic might be a lake of fire to keep out foreign goods." The foreign trade of the United States this year will reach $2,300,000,000, a sufficient proof that the Dingley tariff is something quite different from a policy of isolation.

People engaged in reform work need to be frequently reminded that their efforts should be mainly directed along positive rather than negative lines. The best and most substantial way of overcoming evil is by supplanting it with good. The best way to keep a field clean from weeds is to sow it thick with some useful crop. There is less labor to say nothing of profit involved in this plan than simply to aim at keeping the weeds from growing. The best way to keep boys and girls out of mischief and from forming evil habits is to keep them well employed in something useful. More earnest effort should be made to open the doors to right living than to close by force the doors that open to evil.

A decision will probably be reached some time in the present month in regard to the question of denying second class mail privileges to so called premium publications. Replies have been received from the entire list of 500 publishers to whom Third Assistant Postmaster General Madden wrote some time ago asking their opinion of the contemplated move of the department, and the case has been made up and paced before Postmaster General Smith.

Undoubtedly the views of the prominent publishers of the country as expressed in their replies to the department's circular letter will have great weight with the Postmaster General in reaching a decision. A large percentage of the replies have been in favor of denying the second class privileges to the class of publications mentioned, though, as the premium publishers were also asked for their views, there have been a number of strong protests received. One of the letters in opposition to the proposed move was received from a religious publication which has made a practice of giving Bibles to new subscribers.

M. Fernand de Rodays, who has just been forced to give up the editorship of the Paris Figaro under pressure from the stockholders, has been an editor in Paris for many years and one of the most fearless journalists on the continent. He was the responsible editor of the paper and was compelled by the French code to defend its utterances on the field of honor. To this responsibility he had not the least objection. He is one of the coolest hands in Paris at a duel. His favorite weapon is the pistol, and he has a reputation for excellence of aim, which was of great use to him as a guard around his editorial chair. His last duel was that with young Count de Castellane, who winged him. Rodays insulted the count personally a year ago, but Castellane did not challenge him. Rodays was forced to fight, however, after charging the count with treachery to his country. Rodays is of noble family, very fastidious in his dress and highly explosive; when his temper is aroused. As editor of the Figaro he has criticised unsparingly almost every public man in France.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A PLEASING GUEST.

For the first months after the election of President McKinley in 1896 on the Protection and Prosperity platform we heard frequent inquiries on the part of the enemy as to why prosperity was lagging so long behind its advance agent. Facetious suggestions were made in respect to the advisability of inserting in the newspapers a "lost, strayed or stolen" notice for General Prosperity. Those scintillating Free-Trade witticisms no longer shine forth to dazzle a long suffering public. It has been many a day since any Free-Trader cared to assert that prosperity had not come in with Protection. Now instead of making facetious inquiries as to the whereabouts of General Prosperity, the Free-Traders devote themselves to claiming that the formerly much praised General Prosperity is an unattractive gentleman of protruding stomach, who appeals to men's appetites instead of to their hearts and brains. The great majority of the people of the country, however, have found him to be a very pleasing guest and are more than willing to entertain him for an indefinite period. Four years more are already arranged for, and at the end of that time the invitation will without doubt, be renewed.—Ex.

A story is told of an old lady who never spoke ill of any one. "Why, she would have a good word for the devil himself," said an acquaintance. When this remark was repeated to the old lady referred to, her response was, "Well, we might all imitate him with profit in his persistence." We can say the same for the advocates of Free-Trade. Nothing daunts them. Unfulfilled prophecies do not dampen their zeal. Facts in utter contradiction of their carefully wrought out theories mean nothing to them. "Four years more of Grover" and Free-Trade, they told us, would make the land flow with milk and honey. When the four years more of Grover were at an end the people of the country were poverty stricken and the National Treasury was empty. Nothing daunted, our Free-Trade friends told us that, bad as things were, they would be worse if the country returned to its Protective policy. To realize the literal accuracy of that prophecy one has only to look about upon the unprecedented prosperity which the country has enjoyed since the inauguration of President McKinley and the restoration of Protection in 1897. These things, however, move the Free-Traders not at all. They are still prophesying. Their persistence is most admirable, but there is exhibited a woful lack of good, ordinary, every day common sense.

Funeral of Commander Allibone.

The Army and Navy Journal of June 8 gives an account of the funeral of Commander Charles O. Allibone, a brother of L. B. Allibone, Superintendent of a division of the Pennsylvania railroad. Commander Allibone was known to a number of Bristol people, having formerly attended school at Mt. Holly, N. J., and paying frequent visits to his Bristol school companions here.

The notice of the funeral in the Army and Navy Journal is as follows:

The funeral of Commander Charles O. Allibone, late of the U. S. S. Wilmington, occurred at the U. S. Naval Station, Cavite, at 9.30 a. m. on April 25. The body of the late Commander had been lying in state, under military guard, in the chapel of the Arsenal for several days, awaiting the formation of the plans for the last sad rites. All work in the Arsenal was suspended during the ceremony, and the natives gathered around to the number of two thousand to witness it. The entire First Battalion of the Marine Brigade, under command of Major L. W. T. Waller, marched from Cavite into the Arsenal and were assigned a position fronting the chapel. Following the Marines came the band from the flagship Kentucky, followed by detachments of officers and sailors from all the ships in the harbor. As the body was carried to the front of the chapel, the band played "Nearer My God to Thee." Chaplain Weller of the Y. M. C. A., of Cavite, conducted the last services for the dead Commander. The coffin was draped with a large U. S. ensign, upon which was placed the sword and the insignia of the rank of the dead. Grouped around the coffin were fully a hundred officers, with bared heads, in uniform, with the badge of mourning on the hilts of their swords. Surrounding the officers were six hundred mourners and detachments of sailors from the vessels in the harbor. On the outskirts of the uniformed men came the native population, numbering two thousand.

In the funeral cortege, on its way to the wharf, a sailor bore a commander's pennant at half mast on the staff. Among the officers who marched in the procession were Admiral L. Kempff, Capt. F. Hanford, Commandant of the Naval Station; Col. H. C. Cochrane, District Commander of Cavite, and many others. On the remains reaching the wharf, the Marines formed into a firing party, and as the coffin was placed upon the deck of the Balanga three volleys were fired and taps were sounded. As the Balanga steamed slowly through the fleet to the Brutus, which was to convey the body to the United States, "attention" was sounded by bugles from the different ships, giving a last salute to the departed Commander.

The arrangements for the funeral were under the control of Commander Thomas H. Stevens, commanding the U. S. S. Manila, who was assisted by Lieut. Victor Blue, of the flagship.

Coal prices were advanced by the wholesale agents on April 1st 10c., on May 1st 10c., and notice is given that 10c. per ton more will be charged on and after June 1st. We will sell at the present low rates until July 1st. Peirce & Williams.

NORRISTOWN LETTER.

Norristown, Pa., June 17, 1901.

There is a native bear in Australia, a tailless marsupial, and the female carries her young on the back of her neck. This Kaola and our oppossum, whose pouch is under her body, seem to be united in the new animal lately coming to the knowledge of students not only of marsupial but of municipal creations and classes, but is likely to be biggest at his beginning and destined to early departure, as being too wonderful; as the Jumart of ancient time, the famous offspring of a bull and mare. The only hybrid that survives as being serviceable is the mule, but he is neither very ornamental nor sociable; he is sullen and often disagreeable; is liable to kick, bray, bellow or belch impolitely and inappropriately. A hybrid is really a mixture of two distinct species: our native creature is not exactly composed that way; neither is it a mongrel; it is a biped; bifurcated, with one leg in Harrisburg and the other in Philadelphia, and is born right foot foremost. As the western leg matures in length it is stamped on the head with the Gubernatorial seal, which gives it life, and then the other leg grows down to Philadelphia where it assumes a municipal toot, the animal pulls the other leg along side and the Mayor beholds the wonder and pronounces it good. It has pockets as all marsupial animals have, ready-made, and with capacity comprehensive as the nature and occupation of the animal may demand. Nature is prolific. There are giants in the earth in these days: but each is composed of many, made one. E pluribus unum. What the little fellows lack in their individual selves they make up in fecundity of numbers, like the flies. And they, thus formed, like their prototypes, can cling to the earth, the streets, or to the arches under the earth or to ceilings above. They are armed with fiat power, and their motto is "we are the Legislature and the Councils, the Governor and the Mayor; we own the streets by right of our own; by our decree: veni, vidi, vici. What have you got to say about it?" Thus Philadelphia triumphs over New York with all the brilliant achievements of Tweed in the days of the glory of the Greater Metropolis. The new animal not being normal, but sui generis, was begotten in a hurry, and such small functions as brains, heart and conscience are omitted in the construction but can be supplied by a constitutional amendment, like a voting machine, or other machine of renown. This protoplast will acquire these attributes as the Israelites in their journey through the wilderness of Arabia were supplied with manna—by and from an unseen hand; a hidden power. This Marsupial League—I may as well christen the creature—is not to be confounded with the Municipal League, or with any other thing in the earth, over or under the earth or in the depths of the sea. While it exists people have no rights who are not Municipal-Marsupial. You must belong to the Legislative or the Councilamnic leg, and you must have a pouch on top of the neck, in the forefront and everywhere as provided in the secrets of the great working of the mighty creator of the wonderful creature.

A wonderful mortality has prevailed in the Union Mutual Fire Company since its very inception in 1866. Henry Fleck, the last Treasurer, died on Saturday morning, the 15th. Only a few days before we buried Henry S. Kulp, the last and long-time Secretary; just before, Andrew Supplee, the Treasurer, died. And I can run back through the officers to the first when Ephriam Fenton was President and Charles Hurst, Secretary; Fenton, Alexander H. Supplee, David Truckseis, John Pugh, James Rutherford and other attaches. Charles L. Dager was first Treasurer; Henry Fleck was Treasurer from 1879 to 1887, when Andrew Supplee was elected.

Henry Fleck was 88 years of age and on Saturday morning last he went to Norristown market as usual, laid in his provisions and returned home. Then he sat down and peacefully passed away—as he had long and peacefully lived, beloved by all his friends and neighbors. He was elected President in 1898.

The formation of this insurance company has a history peculiar to itself. The old Montgomery County Mutual Fire Insurance Company seemed for many years to have the field to itself in this county; but during the war of 1861-5, the feeling ran very high between the political parties, especially among farmers and those people who usually take very little interest or action in politics.

The Republicans ruled in the election of officers in the Old Montgomery; so Charles Hurst and other active Democrats about here stirred up the Democratic element, and organized the Union Mutual and elected Democrats to the offices—and it was officered by Democrats ever afterwards; although all of the war dissention has long since died out. But the sentiment was intense 35 years ago. This company was dubbed the Copperhead Company by members of the Old Company, but both flourished; each had honest men in office as a rule; but the race of mutual companies of that class is fast dying out; although the principle is the best. The only trouble is that they are not sufficiently prompt in paying losses—penny wise, pound foolish policy. Insurance against fire is taken as a protection against a sudden and unforseen calamity: for no one can tell when his building will be burned down unless he sets fire to it himself. Hence when a man's house or barn or both shall fall before the consuming blast, he wants the money immediately to make the inevitable repairs. During the long regin of Mebelm McGlathery as Secretary-Treasurer, consel, committee and company, of the Old Montgomery, he became very domineering, and frequent litigation was the rule. He was honest in his accounts, but he was unwilling to pay till after a most tedious investigation often very expensive to the company. I had about sixteen suits against them at one period. There was a storm clause in the policies, and one clause was written insuring "crops," written by the old gentleman with his gray goose quill—he always wrote with a quill. Mark DeHaven brought suit for destruction of his crop in the field. Mclathery said that "crops" only covered crops gathered into the barn—anything cut off, cropped and harvested. This was the leading case and all the others followed. The case was tried here, and I gained it; the company carried it to the Supreme Court, and I gained it again on this definition in the old edition of 1855 of Webster's Dictionary: "Corn and other cultivated plants while growing; a popular use of the word." This definition is omitted in Webster's International Dictionary of 1897. Mr. Hunsicker, attorney for the company, had a very fine, highly-illustrated dictionary full of pictures, that did not have the broad and deep definitions given by Noah Webster, and therefore when I produced my definition in court, Judge Boyer accepted it as common sense, for a man would not want to insure crops against storm when the crops are protected by a barn; but while they are in the field and open to the assaults of storms. The Supreme Court sustained the view, of course. But even after that McGlathery refused to pay the amount and in order to save the old man from a mandamus to compel him to pay, the attorney of the company gave me his own check; and they fought it out among themselves. This has become a leading authority now.

After the case of DeHaven vs. the Insurance Company was settled by the Supreme Court the Old Montgomery Company called in all the policies they could get in, and issued new policies. Thus many points are settled for insurance companies by the adjudication of certain questions disposed of by trials in court.

Our court decided last week that a man can recover damages against an electric company for cropping off his trees along the road to accommodate the use of the wires. Also decided that the Old Montgomery had to pay Jonas Bowman for the loss of his house by fire at Collegeville—although another insurance in another company had not been noted, although it was known.

Too many words are dropped out of the modern lexicons; too many definitions stripped of their strength; and too much space is occupied with the pictorial and purely ornamental features; but the greatest nuisance of the modern makers of books is the constant note "obsolete" after so many important and expressive words used by our genuine scholars. These young possessors must remember that words once used by the ablest men are never obsolete—they are perennial as the hills. The only trouble is that our writers are constantly making new words; our vocabulary is large enough, only let us preserve it undefiled. Of course new inventions bring new words; new relations only introduce us to foreign language and forms of speech. But I find many of the best words used by Shakespeare are noted in the latest unabridged dictionaries as obsolete—they will never be obsolete while Shakespeare lives. The same may be said of the Bible, where the best words in the best sense are employed; yet the authors of Webster's International Dictionary give us hundreds of words as obsolete: as "stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." Now "Stablish" is a strong word and James so employed it, and so does every strong writer and speaker, stablished in the law.

I find much to my regret that the ancient names of our towns and hamlets have been supplanted by new appellations. Athensville yields to Ardmore, and Possum town to Bryn Mawr; Merion Square to Gladwynne, and so on until we find ourselves almost in a foreign country.

* * *

In politics we are much perturbed; it seems as if the mutiny is in the majority; and the majority is waiving a hatchet; but it is all ephemeral; the men in power will soon be out; they will then find what estimate history of their proceedings has written on the hearts of earnest men. Secession swelled and spread till it swept over the entire South; but how soon was it, when none were so poor to do it reverence? So will it be with the foolish fellows who have trodden down the traditions of the State. Barrett, of Lower Merion, and Coulston, of Plymouth, will most likely be the only considered rivals for Sheriff nominations; and the Treasurer, if he come from Pottstown, will send the selection of District Attorney to Sheive, of Norristown, as Hendricks, the present incumbent, resides in Pottstown. But it is a standstill period in politics, and the great heart of the Republicans is not moved to enthusiasm at this time.

* * *

The rain and fall of temperature on Tuesday gave us all the blues. On Tuesday, the 17th inst, our ex-District Attorney, Jacob A. Strassburger will sail to Germany to visit his wife and daughter; the latter is there to be educated in music. We are still hoping for a season of settled summer weather. The superabundance of rain bodes no good; the equilibrium will assert itself; and we will have it dry. This is not much of a prophecy; it is a law of nature.

The bass season is open. Your county and ours furnish plenty of places for the fishermen to enjoy their sport: all I want is the bass on the table.

Our Coroner is busy. Many deaths have occurred that need investigation. Perhaps there never was a time when so many accidents resulting fatally have occurred here and in other parts of the State. Even murder is charged in many instances. The air is dark with disaster. G. N. C.

Suffrage Convention.

The sixth annual convention of the Bucks County Equal Suffrage Association was held in Langhorne Hall, on Saturday. Owing to the inclement weather many delegates from a distance were absent and the home people were largely in attendance at several important social functions, making rather a small attendance to the very interesting and instructive programme prepared for the furtherance of the ballot for women.

The afternoon session opened at 1.45 o'clock. A very cordial address of welcome was given by Miss Esther Justice, President of the Yardley E. S. A., which was responded to by Mrs. E. E. Pownall, of Richboro, and Miss Louisa White, of Fallsington, both finding expression for their beautiful ideas in verse.

Reports of officers of the various associations were given and delegates elected to the next county convention. Miss Susan G. Appleton was elected as the Langhorne delegate for county convention, and Miss Justice, of Yardley, to represent Bucks county at the coming State convention, the time and place having not yet been determined.

A very inspiring address was given by the County President, Mrs. Addie B. Rice, of Newtown, who urged renewed zeal in the great work. This was followed by a full report of the National Convention held at Minneapolis in May, by Dr. Newlin Peirce, of Philadelphia. Delightful music by Miss Grace L. Pryor and Miss Anna Appleton completed the afternoon session.

The speakers of the evening were Mrs. Ruth Shaffner Etnier, recently from Porto Rico, who compared the "Legal Status of Women in Iceland and Cuba," and Miss Jane Campbell, of Philadelphia, who delighted all by her original, practical and very amusing story, "Great Oaks from Little Acorns Grow." A quartette of Newtown ladies, accompanied by Miss Eva Doan, furnished pleasing vocal selections.

Many new friends were made at the informal and very bountiful supper served in the hall to the visiting delegates.

What Some Pennsylvania Towns Would do If Offered Free Libraries.

Andrew Carnegie's offers of various amounts to various towns for the establishment of free libraries are not uniformly acceptable, by reason of the "string" attached. Legal proceedings have recently been begun at Norristown to prevent the local authorities there from annually appropriating $5,000 for the maintenance of a library to be established by a $50,000 gift from Mr. Carnegie on the ground that the condition stipulated prevents its acceptance.

A number of the leading citizens of Chester are opposed to accepting a like amount, with similar conditions imposed. Senator Sproul is quoted as being adverse to it for the reason that he did not believe it would be of any advantage, and would require the raising by taxation or subscription of a large fund each year for the maintenance of a library. Samuel Greenwood and Mayor D. W. Jeffries, prominent citizens of Chester, are also opposed to accepting such a gift,

Altoona and Chambersburg for the same reasons would probably be adverse to taking annual appropriations for the maintenance of libraries.

Lancaster's leading citizens say that they are not in favor of adding an extra tax to support a library in addition to the ones they have.

Allentown would prefer a donation to Muhlenberg College.

Wilkesbarre already has a good public library, but would be glad to receive a gift for the "Boys' Industrial Association."

West Chester's Chief Burgess thinks that the Carnegie proposition could not be accepted by West Chester.

In Reading the sentiment appears to be in favor of accepting such a gift. Mayor Adam H. Leader said "I believe the people of Reading would welcome the gift of a handsome, well equipped library from Mr. Carnegie. I would think the public library the city now has could be merged with the Carnegie." The clerk of Select Council said: "We are spending much more money now for our public library than Carnegie asks the city to guarantee, and I feel sure the library he would give to Reading would be far superior to the institution we now have. I think there is little question that Councils would consider the offer of a Carnegie library favorably."

A Decision on Divorce.

A decision recently rendered by the Supreme Court of the United States has not received so much attention from the press of the country as its importance deserves. This decision, rendered in connection with a Dakota divorce case, is, in effect, that one party to a marriage cannot move to another State, establish a residence and obtain a divorce unless the "matrimonial domicile of the other party to the marriage is also fixed in the same State."

This, it will be observed, is a body blow aimed at the easy divorces which have become so common in some of the States. It is a well-known fact that, just as big corporations go to New Jersey to get their papers, owing to the lax corporation laws of that State, so many people who desire to obtain a divroce without having any sufficient grounds to ask for one of a well-regulated community, have been kept up a most exclusively on the patronage of these people, who seek a fictitious domicile in order to evade the law. Some other States are little if any better than Dakota in this respect.

There are at least three subjects for which there should be one uniform law for the entire country. One of these is bankruptcy, another food adulteration, and the third divorce. At least, there should be certain principles laid down by the Federal government in regard to these matters with which the States should not be permitted to interfere, just as the United States has a mining law, while the States and Territories may frame other mining laws, provided they do not conflict with the Federal regulations. It is not a healthy or creditable state of affairs that a man or a woman may be regarded as married in one State, and at the same time to be considered as living in concubinage in another.

Massage for Dyspepsia.

A French medical journal cites a number of cases where great and lasting benefits were derived by people suffering from dyspepsia and abdominal diseases, from a gentle massage treatment of the abdomen. One case mentioned is that of a young man aged 20 years, who for six months had been suffering with his stomach. In spite of varied treatment he was gradually growing worse and looked like one in the last stages of phthisis. He suffered from constipation and insomnia; he was very nervous and was convinced that he was about to die. After instituting the abdominal massage his condition rapidly improved; his abdomen, which had resembled that of a child with Meningitis, became supple and daily enlarged. The treatment was not severe nor very special. His pain disappeared, and he was able to digest all that was given to him. The patient gained in six months about sixty-five pounds, which he has not lost since that time, now five years ago.—Leslie's Weekly.

A severe sprain will usually disable the injured person for three or four weeks. Many cases have occurred, however, in which a cure has been effected in less than one week by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm. For sale by all druggists.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

LOCAL MISCELLANY.

Dewitt S. Keller has been appointed constable in Nockamixon township.

Thieves stole 800 feet of feed wire from the Bristol and Torresdale trolley line between Eddington and Croydon last week.

Brigadier General Schall has finally determined to name the camp of the First Brigade at Prekasie "Camp Egbert," after the gallant Pennsylvanian who was Colonel of the Fifteenth Infantry, and who lost his life in the Philippines.

The cylinder head of the smaller and older engine at the power house of the Newtown Electric Street Railway Company blew out on Sunday, with apparently no cause whatsoever. Practically no damage was done and no material delay ensued in running the cars.

A telephone pole war is on between the Langhorne borough authorities and the Standard Telephone Company, which erected poles without the consent, it is alleged, of the authorities. They were given notice to remove them, but, failing to act, the authorities on Tuesday had the poles cut down.

Charles Knapp met death on the cut-off railroad at Langhorne Tuesday morning. He was working between the freight tracks when a train passed on that track, one of the trains broke in two, the broken coupling pin flying through the air and striking Knapp on the head. He was stunned and fell beneath the cars and was terribly mangled.

The spring assessment of deaths and births of the county shows that in the six months from December 1, 1900, to May 1, 1901, there were 583 births and 490 deaths. As usual the Second ward of Bristol leads in the number of deaths and births, having 22 of the former and 24 of the latter. Doylestown township comes second in the number of deaths, having 21, and Newtown in the birth rate, numbering 23.

The old stone flour mill below the railroad on Mill street, Morrisville, will soon be a thing of the past. Contractor Mason had a force of men razing the walls and clearing the property. This is one of the old land marks of the borough as some years ago when owned by Howell Brothers the old mill was run night and day, but owing to the gradual filling up of the creek the water supply became insufficient to turn the wheel and the mill was abandoned.

C. E. Speerl, of Philadelphia, was married to Miss Minnie Craig, daughter of Robert Craig, proprietor of the Brick Hotel, Newtown, in the hotel parlor, Tuesday evening. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. J. Elms, pastor of the Presbyterian Church. The bride wore applique point d'esprit over white silk, and carried a bouquet of white American Beauties. Miss Lillian M. Speerl and Miss Margaret Craig were the bridesmaids. Each was gowned in white point d'esprit, and carried pink roses. Thomas Stockley and Frank Hort, both of Philadelphia, were the best men.

Parasites and Figs.

A new industry has been brought into the United States during the past two years by the introduction and acclimatization of the little insect which fertilizes the Smyrna fig in Mediterranean countries. The dried-fig industry in this country has never amounted to anything. The Smyrna fig has controlled the dried-fig markets of the world, but in California the Smyrna fig has never held its fruit, the young figs dropping from the trees without ripening. It was found that in Mediterranean regions a little insect known as the Blastophaga fertilizes the flowers of the Smyrna fig with pollen from the wild fig which it inhabits. The United States Department of Agriculture in the Spring of 1899 imported successfully some of these insects through one of its traveling agents, Mr. W. T. Swingle, and the insect was successfully established at Fresno in the San Joaquin Valley. A far-sighted fruit grower, Mr. George C. Roeding, of Fresno, had planted some years previously an orchard of 5000 Smyrna fig trees and wild fig trees, and his place was the one chosen for the successful experiment. The little insect multiplied with astonishing rapidity, was carried successfully through the Winter of 1899-1900, and in the Summer of 1900 was present in such great numbers that it fertilized thousands of figs, and fifteen tons of them ripened. When these figs were dried and packed it was discovered that they were superior to the best imported figs. They contained more sugar and were of a finer flavor than those brought from Smyrna and Algeria. The Blastophaga has come to stay, and the prospects for a new and important industry are assured.

Don't Marry.

Almost everybody remembers the celebrated advice of the London Punch, "To those about to marry. Don't." There is in that advice the expression of the feeling of many a mother who says, "I hope my daughter will never marry and suffer as I have."

In ninety-eight cases in every hundred there's no need for this suffering. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures the womanly diseases which cause wifely misery. It dries enfeebling drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It invigorates the womanly organism, tranquilizes the nerves and gives the mother strength to give her children.

Do not allow an unscrupulous dealer to sell you something in place of "Favorite Prescription," claimed to be "just as good." There is nothing just as good for women as "Favorite Prescription."

"I am so pleased with your instructions, I hardly know what thanks to give you for your kind favors," writes Mrs. Milo Bryant, of Lota, St. Thomas Co., Ga. "You can publish my few statements to the world, hoping all suffering women will know and be healed. I suffered so much with great pains in my back and the lower part of my stomach and palpitation of the heart, that at times I could hardly lie down, and could hardly get up in the morning, but after using three bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and two vials of Dr Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, I feel like a new woman."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure sick headache.

The old horse car service has been resumed on the Bristol end of the Philadelphia and Bristol trolley line. Several weeks ago the tracks on Otter street were covered over with cut stone, but on Monday morning about three o'clock the residents living on that street were awakened by the sound of workmen shoveling away the stone. Upon investigation it was found that a car was being brought up the tracks. Cars are now run from the corner of Bath street to the end of the tracks in front of the Gaw property in the township. The railway's action is somewhat involved in mystery.

An Original Hymn.

During the prayer meeting service held by the Epworth League in the chapel of the M. E. Church on last Sunday evening a hymn was sung by James M. Boyce, which he had composed himself, the music being written by Walter F. Hall. Following are the words of the hymn:

BLEST ETERNITY.

How happy we will ever be,
When in that blest eternity,
We find ourselves within the fold,
And our dear Saviour's face behold.

And, Oh! That smile which He'll bestow,
On us who've followed here below,
And, Oh! The joy forever more,
When we dwell on Canaan's shore.

When we are with sweet music thrilled,
Of heavenly joys we will be filled;
Then we'll be glad we've won the race,
When we behold the Saviour's face.

'Tis time for you; 'Tis time for me;
To think of our Eternity;
Oh! Let us be in bright array,
To meet our Saviour on that day.

Fugitive Captured.

Herman Ott, the Bedminster school teacher who has been a fugitive from justice for some time, having fled to evade prosecution for violation of the liquor laws, was located in New Jersey the other day by Sheriff Hobensack, and on Tuesday was taken from Mount Holly jail to the Doylestown prison. It is alleged that Ott furnished liquor to his pupils. Another man is also missing in this case. He is former Constable Harvey K. Myers, who failed to make return of the matter, and who fled from his home when prosecution was instituted for neglect of duty.

Killed on the Railroad.

Antonio Overson, an Italian tracksman employed on the Pennsylvania railroad, was struck by the Colonial express and instantly killed near the Hollow creek on Tuesday morning at about 11.30 o'clock. Overson's attention was distracted from the approach of the fast line by a passing freight. His body was hurled against the freight train and badly cut and bruised. The remains were given into the custody of Undertaker Rue. Coroner Kunsman was summoned, and the testimony of the foreman and members of the gang taken. The body was removed to Trenton during the afternoon. Overson was thirty-two years of age, and had been in the country but two months.

A Correction.

A committee from the German Club at Hulmeville called upon the Gazette on last Monday for the purpose of denying the statement which appeared in last week's Gazette to the effect that the crowd of drunken men and women which came to Bristol on Sunday night on the trolley were visitors at the Hulmeville Club. The gentlemen stated that the club is an orderly organization, and the publication of the incident has wrought an injury to the reputations of some of Hulmeville's best citizens. The committee informed us that our informant was mistaken; that the revelous party spent the day in the vicinity of Midway and not at Hulmeville. We cheerfully make the correction.

An Attempted Murder.

Thoams H. Simpson, a hand employed on the farm of Henry L. Gaw, in West Bristol township, is at St. Francis' Hospital, Trenton, suffering from the murderous assaults of John Warren, a fellow workman. According to the statement of the injured man, Warren struck him over the head last Thursday morning with a heavy iron fork while he was milking a cow. After falling to the ground Warren continued to beat his victim with the fork. Simpson was left unconscious on the ground and Warren departed for parts unknown. Simpson was found later and carried into the house, a doctor summoned, and the wounds dressed, after which he was conveyed to the hospital. The two men had been employed on the farm for about three months and roomed together. A previous quarrel in which Simpson bested Warren was the cause of the latter's revengful assault.

Death of William P. Tomlinson.

William P. Tomlinson, editor of the Topeka Daily Democrat, died Thursday in Topeka, Kansas. He was a native of Bucks county and a brother of Robert K. Tomlinson, who died Tuesday, June 11th, near Brownsburg, and also of M. Harvey Tomlinson, of Trenton.

Mr. Tomlinson went to Kansas in the early fifties and took part in the struggle between the free-state and pro-slavery border ruffian element during the settlement of the territory. After the struggle of the anti-slavery party he went to New York, engaged in newspaper work and published "Kansas in 1858," an account of the border-warfare. He subsequently returned to Kansas, married and settled permanently. He continued in newspaper work and was editor for various papers. He was private secretary to Governor Glick, who had defeated John P. St. John for re-election.

Mr. Tomlinson was in early youth an ardent Republican, but in later life became affiliated with the Democratic party.

A TRIP TO BUFFALO.

THE PRESS LEAGUE ON ITS OUTING VISITS THE EXPOSITION AND NIAGARA FALLS.

Last Friday morning the Press League of Bucks and Montgomery counties, started on its fifth annual outing. The party left the Reading terminal in two special Pullman coaches attached to the 8 o'clock train. At Bethlehem the cars were detached and connected with the Lehigh Valley day express.

The ride over the great double-track scenic highway was a delightful one and thoroughly enjoyed by the league of scribes and their lady guests. Allentown, Wilkesbarre, Glen Summit, and the many interesting points on route were viewed with interest. Ithaca, situated on the southern extremity of Cayuga Lake commanded more than ordinary attention. As the train passed on Cornell University stood out in bold relief on the hillside opposite the city. Lunch was had at Sayre and dinner served at Geneva. The party arrived at Buffalo at 9.35 p. m. and by a special trolley were conveyed to the Alcazar, a new hotel located at the Elmwood avenue entrance to fair grounds.

Saturday and Monday were devoted to "doing" the Exposition and on Sunday the party spent the day at Niagara Falls.

Early Saturday morning the party separated into small groups and spent the day in the Exposition grounds, viewing the attractions.

It is a difficult matter to faithfully portray the grandeur and beauty of the great Pan-American display, with its multifarious productions of art, science and nature. Of course the buildings are the premier features. They are arranged to form a grand court, and probably while not so large as those of the World's Fair, they transcend them in architectural beauty and there is a further enhancement by reason of the color schemes which have been used in adornment.

In the centre of the court stands the magnificent shaft representing the electrical and cascade tower, which at night is a fiery pillar illumined with nearly a hundred and fifty thousand electric lights. Elevators carry passengers up three hundred feet in the tower where a beautiful vista greets the eye.

The chief buildings are arranged about the court in systematic order. The eye of the visitor is astonished at the magnificent scene beheld on all sides. On every side is seen measureless pilasters, gigantic arches, colossal columns, galleries, tribunes and porticoes. Plazas, sunken gardens, fountain courts and esplanades afford attractive places in the open. Starting at one end is the great Staduim with seating capacity for 12,000 people, where daily sports are held. Next is the Agricultural buildings, the manufactures and liberal arts, the United States Government building, then a group of state buildings. On the opposite side of the court are located the electricity, mining and transportation, graphic arts, temple of music, and horticultural buildings. Numerous smaller, but handsome structures are interspersed.

The exhibits, while not equal to the Chicago fair are creditable and form interesting objects of inspection.

A person visiting the exposition should not fail to be in the vicinity of the electric tower when the shades of night begin to spread its gloom. At that period Sousa's band plays the beautiful hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee," and slowly the myriads of electric lamps simultaneously start to glow, and as the strains of the music increase the lights increase until the illumination is perfect, and all of the buildings have the appearance of architecture wrought in fire.

The Midway is the greatest exposition of novelties that has ever been attempted in that line. There are enough shows of that character to entertain the visitors for several days. While some of them have more merit than others, all are worthy of a visit.

The chief Midway shows which the visitor should not fail to visit are the Johnstown flood, the Indian Congress, Bostock's trained animals, the Infant Incubator, the Philippine and Hawaiian villages, Trip to the Moon, Streets of Cairo, Jerusalem and the Crucifixion, The Moorish Palace, The House Upside Down, Darkness to Dawn. The magnificent painting of Cleopatra by Astley D. M. Cooper is an artistic marvel. Other attractions too numerous to mention afford much pleasure.

On Sunday the newspaper party chartered a trolley and spent the day at Niagara Falls. The great gorge trolley route was travelled, trips made on the "Maid of the Mist," and picturesque scenes viewed from Goat Island.

At a business meeting held Monday morning the following resolutions were adopted:

The Press League of Bucks and Montgomery counties on its fifth annual summer outing desires to express its appreciation to the Executive Committee for the opportunity afforded the League to enjoy one of the most interesting excursions in its history to Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

We are especially indebted to the Reading and Lehigh Valley Railroad Companies and the Pullman Parlor Car Company for courtesies extended by putting at the service of the League special cars to transport the members and their ladies to and from the Exposition at Buffalo; also to the representative at publicity, Mark Bennett, of the Pan-American Exposition, for favors extended; and to the managers of the many interesting entertainments on the Exposition grounds for their special courtesies.

We desire to hereby express our appreciation and admiration of the Exposition, and to all persons who contemplate a visit to the Exposition we give our hearty endorsement of its purpose and achievements and can recommend its Midway attractions as worthy of consideration and patronage.

We also commend the spirit actuating the citizens of Buffalo in their efforts to afford economical and satisfactory accommodations to visitors to the Exposition and to their beautiful and progressive city.

To B. F. Hardesty, of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, for personal supervision of our comfort en route, and to President Johnson and J. Clinton Sellers, chairman of the Executive Committee, for their painstaking labor in the matter of arrangements. we extend sincere thanks.

A Sensational Elopement.

A sensation has been created in Bristol by reason of the elopement of Miss Tessie Farley with James McCue, of Hackensack, who was Superintendent of the mill at Bristol when the Campbell Wall Paper Company were operating the old Wilson & Fenimore plant.

Miss Farely met McCue while the latter was located here, and evidently the infatuation was mutual because last December, after the company removed to Hackensack Miss Farley followed and became McCue's secretary and stenographer. She made her home with McCue and his supposed wife.

Two weeks ago the couple suddenly disappeared from Hackensack, and were married at Jersey City Monday afternoon by Justice of the Peace Crawford. Previous to the ceremony McCue made the following affidavit:

I, James McCue, solemnly swear that I am not the husband of the woman residing in Hackensack and supposed to be Mrs. McCue. The only Mrs. McCue is the young lady named by you as Miss Tessie Farley.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this seventeenth day of June, 1901.
Witness: JAMES McCUE.
F. J. PILLSBURY.
EDWIN FRENCH, JR.,
Notary Public, 85; N. Y. Co. and State.

Last Wednesday week McCue left his Hackensack home and with him went Miss Farley. On his departure McCue told his supposed wife that he was going to New York on business and that the business required the services of a stenographer.

The couple were not seen again until Monday when Police Captain Cody, of Jersey City, saw them pass the Gregory street station at that place. Captain Cody followed the couple but he lost their trail and before he found it again, at the office of Justice Crawford, they had been wedded.

Mrs. McCue No. 1 states positively that she has been the lawful wife of McCue for twelve years and that eleven children have been born to them, four of whom are living. The above affidavit was required because several justices had refused to perform the ceremony because of the knowledge of the existing Mrs. McCue.

Miss Farley was well known in Bristol and made her home here, where she has many relatives. She graduated from the State Normal School at Trenton with the class of '99 and had received a business education. She is about 23 years of age.

While a resident of Bristol McCue lived at the Closson House, and was known about town as a gay young man, who was particularly fond of the society of young women.

Bristol relatives were interviewed by a Gazette reporter, but they claimed to have no knowledge in the case beyond that which has been published in New York papers.

Special School Board Meeting.

A special meeting of the Public School Board was held in the Directors' room in the high school building on Monday evening to elect teachers and janitors for the ensuing year and to open bids for supplying the schools with coal. All the old teachers were re-elected to their present positions, with the exception of Miss Frances Hykes, who was selected to fill the new position of assistant teacher in the high school and grammar A department, which position was created by the board at its last meeting. Miss Katherine Bell, who has been teaching for the past three years at Lizette, Bucks Co., was elected to fill the vacancy in primary C. department No. 1, Washington street, caused by the elevation of Miss Hykes.

Following is the full corps of teachers elected for the ensuing term, together with the departments in which they teach: High school building, Wood street—High school, Mary E. Latin and drawing teacher, Reba L. Knight.

All the old janitors were-elected. The contract for furnishing the schools with coal was awarded to Peirce & Williams, their bid of $4.98 per ton being the lowest.

	$62 95

This has all been paid to the Pennsylvania Bible Society, of which $30 was to constitute Rev. Alexander Alison, D. D., of Bristol, a life member of the Pennsylvania Bible Society. It is very desirable that all the churches in the county should take up collections for the society this summer. The annual meeting is to be held in September at Neshaminy.

Tyson-Alison Wedding.

In the presence of several hundred invited guests last evening Miss Jean Ann Alison, daughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Alison, was united in marriage to Thomas Henry Tyson, of New York. The wedding took place in the new Presbyterian chapel, which was handsomely decorated for the occasion. The altar was banked with ferns and white daisies which were arranged in the form of a crescent. The stair railings leading to the gothic arched balcony and the pillars were festooned with the same variety of plants. The beautiful interior architecture of the building, augmented by the decorations presented a scene of lovliness never excelled upon a like occasion in Bristol.

Promptly at eight o'clock the bridal party entered. The groom attended by his best man came by the Radcliffe street entrance. From Cedar street the ushers came in singly and slowly wended up the centre aisle to the altar. Following came the bridesmaids; next the bride unattended. Lohengrin's wedding march was played by William G. Buckman, the church organist, the instrument being concealed behind a bank of ferns.

Miss Alison was the representation of the ideal June bride and was beautifully costumed in a gown of muslin de soie over white silk which was trimmed with lace and designs in narrow white silk ribbon. She wore a veil which was capped with a spray of orange blossoms and carried a bunch of white roses. The groom was attired in the conventional manner.

The bridesmaids were Dr. Julia H. Slack, of Bristol, and Miss Adah Smith, of Philadelphia. The former wore a gown of sheer white material, with pink chiffon trimmings. Miss Smith wore a pale blue crepe de chine. Each carried a bunch of pink roses.

Rev. John Alison, of Deposit, N. Y., acted as best man. The ushers were F. Bankier, of Passaic, N. J.; S. K. Piercy, of Brooklyn; French Dorrance, of Cornell University, and Rev. Alexander Alison, Jr., of Philadelphia.

After the wedding ceremony a reception was held and luncheon served at the parsonage to which were invited the trustees and elders of the church and their wives and the out-of-town guests. The parlor and dining rooms were tastefully decorated in red, pink and green, roses, peonies, smilax, ferns, and palms being used. Misses Ethel Pursell, Helen Strauser, Florence Stuckert, Mildred and Florence Weaver attended the guests in serving.

Mr. and Mrs. Tyson took a carriage and were driven to Langhorne where they took the 10.57 train. They will make their home at Roseville, N. J.

Gun Club Shoot.

The ninth monthly shoot of the Bristol Gun Club took place on Saturday afternoon. The weather was cold and stormy throughout the day but late in the afternoon the rain ceased and the match was shot off, only four members competing. Three of the contestants tied in the first series of five birds each. In the second series Brudon forged ahead with the three other contestants but one bird behind. At the end of the third series Bruden still led, but McLaughlin was pushing him hard, being but one bird behind. In the final series both Bruden and McLaughlin broke the same number of blue rocks and their score at the end stood relatively the same as at the beginning of the series, Bruden winning by one bird. Ratcliffe and Coleman tied each other throughout the contest and in the final series each of them broke every bird. This is Bruden's third consecutive victory and he is now tied with McLaughlin for first place. As three matches yet remain to be shot off, and as Ratcliffe and Coleman have each won a match, it is quite possible that it will require the last match to be shot before the winner of the medal can be announced. Following is the score:

Bruden,	01001	11111	01111	11101	—15
M'Laughlin,	10101	10011	11110	01111	—14
Ratcliffe,	00111	11001	01001	11111	—13
Coleman,	00111	10011	01001	11111	—13

In a sweepstake match at the close of the regular shoot, Ratcliffe won by breaking nine out of ten birds.

THE HAPPIEST HEART.

The happiest heart is simple;
None dares to call it wise.
It sees the beauty of its life
With frank and truthful eyes.
It has a knack of loving;
It has a trustful way;
Oh, what a foolish heart is this,
The worldlier people say!

The happiest heart is childlike;
It never quite grows old;
It sees the sunset's splendor
As it saw the dawning's gold.
It has a gift for gladness;
Its dreams die not away;
Oh, what a foolish, happy heart,
The worldlier people say!

A KNIGHT ERRANT

How He Stood by an Innocent Girl In the Hour of Her Peril.

As a matter of fact, Standish was not cold. He was indeed freshly and unexpectedly romantic under his apparent invulnerability. Once, long ago in early manhood, he had seen for an instant ideal love as he had dreamed it. It had not been for him, and it had flown to fairer worlds almost before he had realized its beauty, but he had never forgotten the revelation.

If now he sometimes looked over curiously at the girls and women he met, it was because he had always an irrational hope that that divine glimpse might again be vouchsafed to him. How did he know but that any day, in any drawing room, in the street, on the river, he might meet the lady of his dreams. He had always been disappointed hitherto. Never since Mary Grayson died had he met love.

Women of all ages made much of him. He was eligible as well as attractive and had gifts of mind as well as of person and manner.

So it was that he had drifted into being made much of by Mrs. Lawrence, the wife of Tom Lawrence, a good, honest, stupid fellow, one fair hair of whose head was worth all worthless little Mrs. Dolly.

Standish could hardly have explained how he had drifted into being always at Mrs. Dolly's beck and call and why he was to be found so often on the hearthrug at the Cedars when the Lawrences' butler brought in the afternoon tea. It was Mrs. Dolly's doing, no doubt, and Tom, who was head over ears in love with his heartless little wife, looked on Dolly's friendship with Herbert Standish contentedly.

Standish arrived one afternoon in April rather later than usual and found Mrs. Lawrence very much put out at something or other. Even the lilies of the valley which he laid at her feet failed to dispel the cloud on her brow. For the first time Standish felt that Mrs. Dolly was inclined to impose a yoke upon him to which his broad shoulders did not bend gracefully.

While he was chafing a little at the lady's exactions the hopes of the house, Guy, Cecil and Arthur, rioted into the room, followed more demurely by their sister, Millicent, a mincing little girl, who, by and by, would be the image of her mother. It was a jest of Mrs. Dolly's that Standish was to marry Millicent one day, and even now, at 8 years old, Millicent, nursing her doll, made unsuspected eyes at the tall figure on the hearthrug.

Following came Nora O'Brien, Mrs. Lawrence's new governess.

As the slender girl in the straight blue frock passed silently to her place behind the tea table Standish's heart gave a sudden, unexpected throb. With such a heart throb the lad of 18 had looked on the heaven destined beauty of Mary Grayson, but never since, never since, had it beaten with such a high hope, with such a quick despair.

An instant and he had stepped forward to take the cups from the new governess' hand.

Mrs. Lawrence had not introduced him to the new inmate of the house. She never did introduce her governesses, a fact of which Standish was aware and which had often caused him a feeling of contemptuous irritation with charming Mrs. Dolly. But since he was so often a visitor he had come to be on speaking terms with the long line of Mrs. Lawrence's governesses, so many of whom had failed to please the lady and her exacting young daughter.

As he took the cup from Miss O'Brien's hand he paused an instant and looked down into her eyes. She did not change color, but looked up at him steadfastly. Her eyes were dark blue, fringed with black lashes. He seemed to look down into her heart in that instant of time, to ask her if she was really the one he had been looking for since he lost Mary Grayson. What she answered with her steadfast long look he could not read easily. Only he was sure she was honest and true and that her love was his to win if he could. He smelled the fresh, springlike smell of the daffodils in the breast of her blue gown. It was bewildering.

Then a word from his hostess, spoken a little snappishly, recalled him. He carried the cup of tea to Mrs. Dolly and fetched her the tiny table to hold it which she was in the habit of using. He offered her the foie gras sandwiches and the buttered toast. Only a very fine observer would have noticed that his eyes were alert now, no longer jaded, and that something like a spring wind had put a little color in his face and ruffled his smooth hairs ever so little.

Little Millicent, on her footstool, watched the new governess from eyes that had a trick of narrowing like her mother's, watched her and then went on furtively to Herbert Standish's subtly altered face.

The weeks of the spring went by in a jocund procession. Standish was as assiduous as ever in his attendance at the Cedars, and the house by the river grew pleasanter as the May burst in blossom and the little flotilla of the water lilies rocked at its moorings.

He hardly ever spoke with Mrs. Lawrence's governess, yet from his place on the hearthrug against the background of palms and ferns which had taken the place of the fire his eyes watched her incessantly.

He had angered Mrs. Lawrence once or twice by, unnecessarily as it seemed to her, turning over the pages of the governess's music and lingering by the piano while she sang heart piercing Irish songs in the richest, softest of contraltos. However, after a time he was forgiven, because he loved music, and it was excuse enough for his transgression, since even Mrs. Lawrence could not deny the beauty of the Irish girl's singing.

So few words had passed between them, and yet he seemed to know so much about Nora O'Brien and her uneventful history. Her father, the retired army officer, her delicate mother, the old, big barrack of a house on the Shannon, full of out at elbows, happy, hungry girls and boys. He imagined it as Nora's homesick eyes saw it. He knew about her years in the French convent. He knew the very names of the dogs in her Irish home. And yet so little, so little, had passed between them.

He was so far from making her conspicuous by his attentions that perhaps only one person was aware of the steady regard with which the very eyes of his soul seemed turned on Nora O'Brien, and that was a little person, supposed about this time to be much engrossed in the making of a doll's trousseau.

It was about two months after Miss O'Brien's coming to the Cedars that Standish came in upon a perturbed scene in the drawing room, where things were usually so well ordered. He came in unannounced by way of the garden and the windows to find Mrs. Lawrence and her [illegible]

The lady was in a high state of wrath. Her cheek had an added brilliance to that of the rouge pot, and her eyes were narrowing and opening to display a fierce light in depths that usually looked shallow enough. Her voice was raised, her dramatic right hand pointed to the pale girl, who stood with one hand resting on the table, as though for support.

As soon as Mrs. Lawrence caught sight of Standish she dropped into a chair and pressed her handkerchief to her eyes.

"I am so ashamed," she began, "such a dreadful thing, and to think of those dear children! How little I knew!"

"Mrs. Lawrence thinks I stole one of her jewels," said the girl, answering the question in Standish's face. She was white to the lips, but stood perfectly upright, and something in the pose of her uplifted face suggested an appeal from an earthly to a heavenly judge.

"Think!" echoed Mrs. Lawrence furiously. "When it was found hidden away among your things, you horrid girl! Upon my word, I think in the interests of justice I shall have to prosecute you. If I send you back to your father, you will be presently stealing from somebody else."

"Nonsense!" said Standish, with a roughness he had never before used to a woman. "Miss O'Brien has stolen nothing of yours. What hallucination is this, Mrs. Lawrence?"

Mrs. Dolly gasped for breath, then recovered herself, and her next speech had a slow and cold malice.

"She will have to prove it, then! She admired it from the beginning, my beautiful pink pearl pin. I should never have suspected her, of course, only for my darling Millicent's acuteness. Will you defend Miss O'Brien, Mr. Standish?"

Herbert Standish made a step or two to the girl's side and took her cold fingers in his and raised them to his lips.

"If she will permit me," he said, "I shall defend her with my life."

There was a horrible commotion outside, and suddenly a struggling little girl in the midst of a mass of boys came as though from a catapult into the middle of the drawing room floor.

"Here she is, the little sneak!" cried Guy, Cecil and Arthur with one voice, pushing their sister Millicent toward the astonished group by the mantelshelf.

Millicent was disheveled and looked cold. Her eyes had frozen tears in them, and her lips were blue.

"What have you been doing to your sister, you rough boys?" cried Mrs. Dolly indignantly, forgetting her own grievances for the moment.

"Only holding her head downward over the pond till she confessed," cried her brothers triumphantly.

"Confessed what?"

"Why that she sneaked that old pin of yours and hid it away in Miss O'Brien's things."

The miserable Millicent's fears melted and began to run forlornly down her cheeks.

"I did do it," she said, "and I don't know what I did it for, and if it wasn't for those dreadful boys I'd say now I didn't do it. But they'd nearly drown me again."

Mrs. Dolly pushed the sobbing penitent from her.

"I'm really very much annoyed," she said. "I'm sure I don't know why people ever have any children to be so horrid. I must apologize, Miss O'Brien. Of course you won't care to remain in charge of these children any longer."

Standish had a wicked thought of suggesting that Miss O'Brien had a very good case for damages, but refrained for Tom Lawrence's sake.

"It has only made us understand each other a little sooner," he said, taking up again the hand which the entrance of the young Lawrences had made him drop. "But, of course, in any case I could not have spared her to you for very long, Mrs. Lawrence."

"I had no idea"— began Mrs. Dolly civilly.

"I say, old fellow," shouted the three hopes of the house in one voice, "it's no end of a shame for you to go sneaking the very nicest governess we ever had."—Mainly About People.

An Easy Shave.

He was one of these smooth faced young men who chew gum because it's ladylike and smoke cigarettes because it's manly.

"Hair cut?" asked the barber as he threw his head back on the rest.

"Naw, course not!" indignantly replied the customer. "Can't yer see I want a shave?"

The barber heaved a weary sigh as he lathered the face, which looked like an advertisement for somebody's complexion balm. Then he picked up a neck razor, whipped it over the strop once and scraped the lather off with the back of the instrument.

"By Jove, a shave makes a man feel better," ejaculated the smooth faced one, rubbing his hand gently over his skin.

"That's the fourth one of them things today," growled the barber.—Denver Times.

A Matter of Mind.

"I have a great mind to go to the political club tonight," said Mr. J. to his wife.

"What?" she replied with surprise.

"I have a great mind to go to the club tonight."

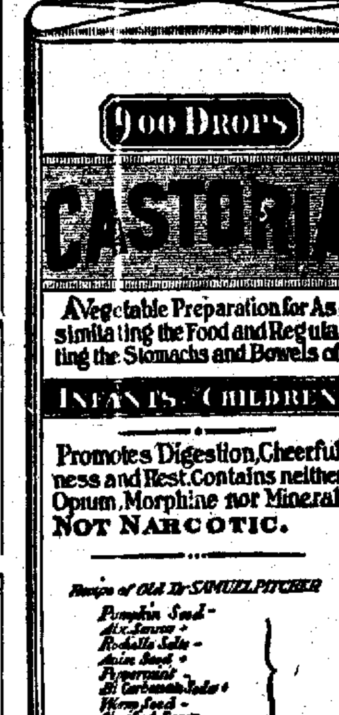

"Whose?" she asked.

"Whose what?"

"Whose great mind?"

"Why, my own, of course, madam."

"Oh!" and the rising inflection she gave the ejaculation was very provoking to a man of fine feeling.—Syracuse Herald.

WORLD'S OILFIELDS.

Texas Spouters Have an Advantage Over All Others.

LOCATION IS MOST FAVORABLE.

Wells Are Within Eighteen Miles of Their Seaport—The Product Valuable Chiefly For Fuel, and the Supply Apparently Inexhaustible—A Great Rival of Steam Coal.

Five gushers already in the Beaumont field is a record which is adding daily interest in the development in the new oil region of Texas, says a Baltimore dispatch to the New York Commercial Advertiser. It seems to be generally recognized that the great value of the oil is its quality as a fuel, placed by nature where it is capable of doing the greatest good to the greatest number at the least cost of production. This is the position taken in an elaborate article reviewing the world's oil trade, but having special reference to the Texas situation, published in the current number of The Manufacturers' Record, and written by a student of the oil situation from the broadest kind of standpoint. He writes:

"On first impression it would seem that as the Beaumont oil is chiefly a fuel oil it would be of secondary importance to the higher grade oil, but when the relative demands for fuel oil and refined oil are considered it is evident that a fuel oil in the apparently inexhaustible quantities in which it has been found in the Beaumont field is of much more importance and value than an illuminating oil in the comparatively limited quantities that nature has provided for it. The demand for fuel oil is practically unlimited and the demand has been met in only one country, Russia, where the consumption of fuel oil now amounts to more than eight times the combined consumption of all the refined oils."

The writer sketches the situation in the oilfields of the United States, Russia, the Dutch East Indies and other countries and, returning to the study of the Beaumont field, writes:

"The special advantage which Beaumont oil has over any other oil in the world is in the fact that it can be produced and marketed at a minimum cost. Being produced within 18 miles of a seaport, it can be piped into tank steamers at a cost so small as to be almost incalculable, and it can be delivered at the seaports of the United States, Mexico, the West Indies, South America and Europe at a cost so low that no other fuel can be used in competition for steam purposes. Fuel oil from wells in the Beaumont field can be piped to the seaboard at Port Arthur and run into tank steamers at a total cost of production and transportation not exceeding 10 cents a barrel, and, as 3½ barrels of oil are equal to one ton of coal for steam purposes, this is equal to the delivery of coal at the seaboard at a cost of 35 cents a ton.

"The location is specially advantageous for shipment to Mexico and the West Indies, which are the largest importers of American coal, receiving nearly 80 per cent of all the coal that is exported, excepting that which goes to Canada. In considering the export feature of fuel oil and the advantageous location of the Beaumont field, the growing importance of New Orleans and Galveston as seaports should not be overlooked. These ports now stand respectively fourth and fifth in the value of their exports, which in each case amounts to more than double that of San Francisco, and are only exceeded by New York, Boston and Baltimore.

"The coal used in the United States for steam and industrial purposes is about 80 per cent of the entire production. Wherever fuel oil has come into competition with coal for steam purposes it has practically driven coal from the field. It has done it in Russia and is now doing it in California, and it will do it wherever it comes into competition with coal which has to be transported long distances."

The article treats of the Beaumont oil as a supplier of fuel for the southwest as well as for foreign shipment and says:

"There is no question that fuel oil which can be put aboard vessels as cheaply as oil from the Beaumont field can be delivered to any point in the United States that can be reached by water at a price which will give it a great advantage over steam coal. It is evident that the market in this direction alone would absorb the entire production of the Texas oilfield at a price which gives its use an advantage over coal. That this will be the case cannot be doubted when it is considered how sensitive industrial works of every kind are to the cost of fuel, which is only second in importance to water transportation as a factor in the location and growth of industrial centers, and the slightest advantage is immediately taken by all consumers."

THE VANISHING HANDKERCHIEF.

A Chemical Reaction That Astounded a Washerwoman.

"The facetious chemist took an ordinary cotton handkerchief and soaked it in nitric and sulphuric acids," says Harvey Sutherland in Ainslee's. "Then, after so long a time, he took it out and rinsed it carefully so as to remove the free acid. It looked then like any other cotton handkerchief. It went to the washerwoman, who put it through all the waters that handkerchiefs go through, hung it out on the line and took it in again when it was dry. She spread it out on the ironing board, put the hot iron on it, and—it went away. There was a flash, a puff of smoke, and then—no handkerchief, not even the ashes of one.

"When you consider how frightened the poor washerwoman must have been at such goings on in the broad, open daylight, how worried she must have been lest the gentleman should think she had stolen his handkerchief, for she was an honest woman I make no doubt whatever, at least as far as cheap cotton handkerchiefs are concerned, and of course she thought he wouldn't believe her when she told him what had become of it, you will see at once that this is really a very fine joke indeed.

"What happened to the handkerchief was what happens to the manufacture of gun cotton. The sulphuric acid takes the water out of the cellulose, and the nitric acid makes an arrangement whereby a certain amount of nitryl gets to take the place of it, so that when fire is applied it all burns at once. Starch is the same thing chemically as cotton, same proportions of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen, only the patterns, so to speak, of the molecule is different, and out of that law abiding box of white grains at this moment in the left hand corner of your kitchen cupboard, madam, could be made enough nitro starch to wreck your happy home while you are saying 'Jack Robinson.' The molasses jug is just as potent for destruction, and an explosive is now marketed that is made from straw nitrated in the same way as cotton.

"Of course you have heard that glycerin, which is so good for chapped hands, can be turned into the most powerful explosive known by the same combination of acids. It is so powerful that it has to be diluted with infusorial earth, each tiny particle of which long years ago was the shell of a little animal that never dreamed it was going to assist in torpedoing an oil well. It seems to me a queer use of this terrible destructive that it should be a medicine, a heart stimulant. If anybody is desirous of getting a headache without a gay evening to precede it, he has only to taste a tiny drop of the yellow, sweetish, oily liquid, and he will think every beat of his heart is a whack of a sledge hammer on the back of his neck."

The most ancient glass had exactly the same component parts as that of today, and the processes used seem to have been similar in all times.

(Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.)

For coughs and colds Benson's Porous Plasters are an incomparably better remedy than any other—external or internal. Their medicinal properties enter the skin and go straight to the seat of the disease.

They relieve and cure a "seated" cold without disturbing the system or upsetting the stomach. Cough mixtures often nauseate. Benson's Plasters are medicinal in the highest degree, and quickest to act.

Placed on the chest or back or on both at once in serious cases, the good effect is felt immediately. The congestion yields, the cough abates and the breathing improves.

Lung or bronchial affections or kidney disease, are cured with the least possible suffering and loss of time.

Benson's Plasters are immeasurably superior to Belladonna, Strengthening, Capsicum or any other combination in plaster form. They are also preferable to ointments, liniments and salves.

Benson's Plasters have received fifty-five highest awards over all competitors; and more than 5,000 physicians and druggists have declared them to be one of the few trustworthy household remedies. For sale by all druggists, or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States on receipt of 25c. each.
